Dear Families,

Happy November and Happy First-Generation Week!

We now in week eleven. In this email you'll see information regarding Spring 2027 Course Registration which begins today with graduate students and continues tomorrow with seniors.

Spring 2027 Course Registration Priority Dates:

- November 2nd Graduates, post-baccalaureates, and seniors accepted to a graduate program
- November 3rd Seniors
- November 9th Juniors
- November 11th Sophomores
- November 18th Continuing Freshmen

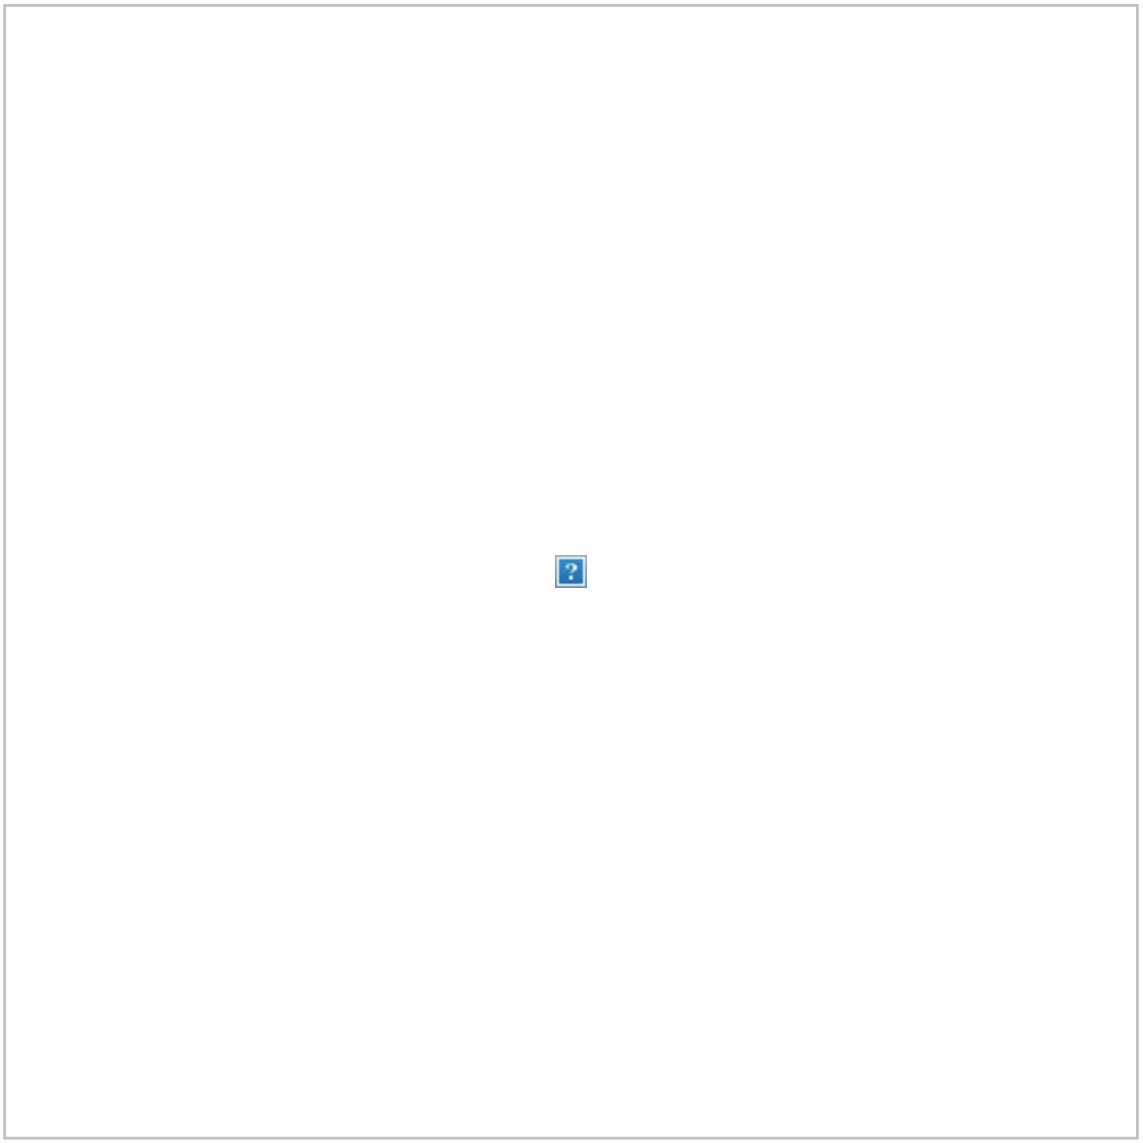

If your student has not met with their advisor to discuss their academic progress and review options for Spring 2027, they should do so as soon as possible.

This week holds a special meaning to many of us including myself. Over thirty years ago I started my journey at Southern as the first in my family to attend college. The pressures of a first-generation student are unique. For many of us, we carry the expectations of our parents, siblings, families and sometimes entire communities. College, for all students, is new and different and for first-generation students and their families it can often be deeply unfamiliar, foreign, and daunting. From navigating a large campus to understanding processes that can feel complicated even to those who administer them, the experience can feel overwhelming. As an institution committed to access and service for the public good, as our mission states, we center the experiences of first-generation students because we know that this allows us to be better for all students. We also recognize and celebrate the talents, perspectives, and accomplishments of our first-generation students. Conversations in classes are deeper and more meaningful because of the diversity of thoughts and experiences our first-generation students bring. Our campus events and activities grow more vibrant, and sometimes being the first to achieve rings louder and shines brighter.

Personally, I know that success is rarely achieved alone. It is our families, mentors and supporters that lift us so that we rise together. As we celebrate our students and their successes, we also want to celebrate their support systems. For those who are guiding their first-generation student along this journey, we want to celebrate you! We thank you! And, we want you to know that we are here for you along the way.

Sincerely,

Dr. Sal Rizza
Director of Orientation, Transition & Family Engagement

From Dawn Stanton, Director of University Access Programs

Dear Families,

At Southern Connecticut State University, nearly one-third of our undergraduate and graduate students are the first in their families to pursue a four-year college degree. During F1rstGen! College Celebration Week, November 2-6, 2026, we'll celebrate their accomplishments, the perspectives they bring to our campus, and the families, friends, and supporters who encourage them along the way.

In University Access Programs (UAP), we have the opportunity to get to know many of the students behind that number. We learn about their goals, their families, and what motivates them. One of my favorite parts of this work is watching students grow in confidence, discover new opportunities, and achieve things they once thought were out of reach. Being the first in a family to pursue a four-year college degree is an important milestone, and students often carry that responsibility with pride, determination, and hope for the future.

Relationships are at the heart of our work. Through one-on-one support, mentoring, and campus connections, we help students find the people and resources that can make a difference during their time at Southern. We want students to know there are people here who care about them, check in on them, and celebrate their successes.

Our celebration week is one more way to bring people together. Beginning with a kickoff featuring Southern alumnus, national leader, educator, and advocate Marcus Stallworth, the week will include opportunities for students, faculty, staff, and alumni to connect, share experiences, learn from one another, and have some fun. From conversations and workshops to wellness activities and community events, there's something for everyone.

To our parents, family members, and supporters: thank you. Your encouragement, advice, sacrifices, and belief in your student matter more than you may realize. Every phone call, text message, conversation, and celebration helps support your student's journey. As we recognize our first-generation students, we also recognize the families and supporters who stand beside them.

All students are welcome. Students whose parents earned a four-year college degree play an important role as friends, classmates, and supporters of their first-generation peers. Learning from one another's experiences and celebrating each other's accomplishments helps make Southern a stronger community.

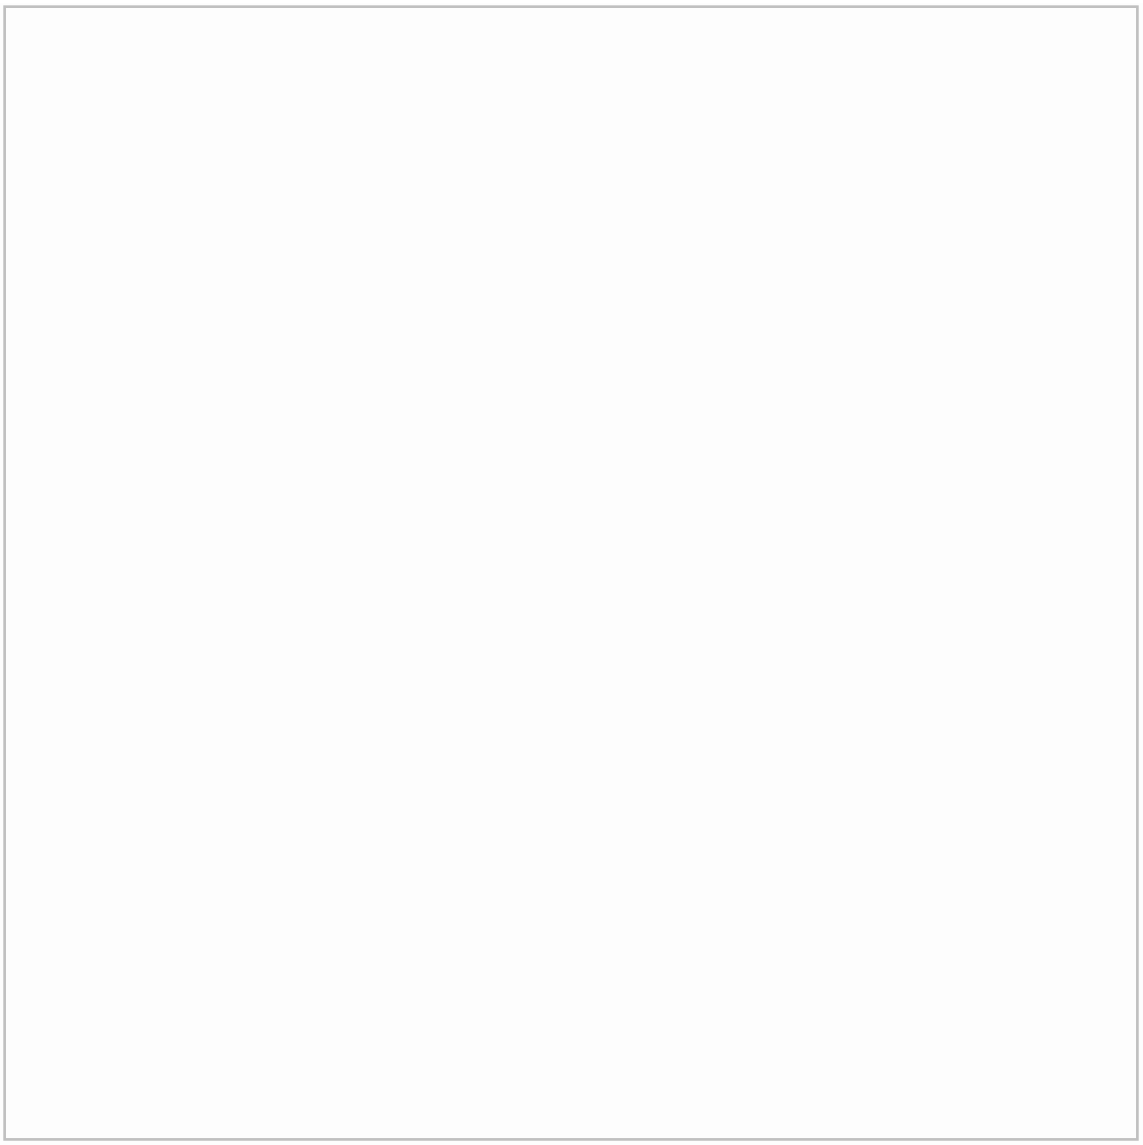

I hope you'll encourage your student to explore the week's events, attend a program that interests them, and invite a friend to join them. We have a lot to celebrate.

Message from Dr. Sandy Bulmer, Interim President to campus regarding First-Gen Week:

Dear Southern Community,

During the week of November 2-6, I invite you to join in the National First-Generation College Celebration. This year, we've expanded from one day to a full week of activities to recognize the diverse experiences and achievements of our first-generation community.

Nearly half of Southern's undergraduate and graduate students identify as first-gen, as do many of our faculty and staff.

As a proud first-generation college graduate myself, this feels particularly meaningful to me. I know from experience that being the first in your family to attend college can mean navigating unfamiliar territory. My parents had little understanding of higher education, and I was fortunate to have teachers, coaches, and mentors who helped me recognize opportunities I might not have considered otherwise.

This week is an opportunity to honor the extraordinary accomplishments and resilience of our entire first-gen community, students, faculty, staff, and alumni, along with the families, colleagues, and mentors who support them. Most importantly, it's a chance to acknowledge the important perspectives they bring to Southern and the impact they make in our community.

Thank you for all you do to make Southern a place where students from every background can find opportunity and succeed. Learn more about this week of events and how to participate below.

- November 3rd Seniors
- November 9th Juniors
- November 11th Sophomores
- November 18th Continuing Freshmen
- November 25th non-degree seeking graduates
- November 30th non-degree seeking undergraduates

Academic Advising Appointments

- Undergraduates: You will meet with your advisor for course registration advice and to receive your registration PIN. If you have been not contacted by your advisor/department, please reach out to them (who is my advisor?) or the department chairperson for your major directly for assistance.

- Graduates: For course registration questions, please reach out to your graduate program coordinator or advisor for support.

Thank you,
The Registrar's Office

Every week, Southern sends an email to all students highlighting the events for the week. We will share a selection of those events here.

The semester is moving along quickly. Can you believe it is already November?! We hope that you benefitted from an extra hour of sleep this weekend and are ready for a new week.

This week we celebrate First Generation Week! Nearly half of our students are the first in their family to pursue a four-year degree! This week we celebrate your investment, your tenacity, and your commitment to becoming a college graduate! You rock!
